Looking for a natural way to stop gout attacks? Then you've come the right place. Here, you will find the cause of your gout, exactly why more people are choosing natural remedies, and, how to stop gout attacks naturally and prevent them from coming back.

- Considering the question of how to stop gout attacks you have 2 basic options; medications or natural remedies.
- And in order to understand their benefits it is worthwhile going over the cause of gout...

Cause of Gout Symptoms

The symptoms of gout -- redness, temperature, stiffness, inflammation, swelling and horrible pain -- arise because of the body's reaction to be able to crystals of uric acid that have accumulated in the joints. The big toe is by far the most prevalent, but gout can appear in most any joint.

The uric acid crystals are produced from excess levels of uric acid that our kidneys have been unable to flush out of our systems, for one reason or another. And uric acid itself is a byproduct of the breakdown of compounds in our cells called "purines". These also exist in much of our food. In your body, they are part of the process that provides us with our energy and protein needs.

So you can see that high levels of uric acid in your bloodstream leads to gout assaults. In order to stop attacks, you need to reduce these higher-than-normal levels of uric acid, and, maintain them at a lot more normal levels for your body.

Drugs to Stop Gout Attacks

When your doctor has diagnosed you with gout they will usually prescribe anti-inflammatory's to reduce the inflammation and help relieve pain. Plus, they may also suggest a long-term span of drugs to help lower your uric acid levels.

- Both in short term pain and symptom relief, and, longer term uric acid reduction, these drugs can work very well.
- Except for two things:

They have some nasty side effects like nausea, vomiting, headaches, stomach cramps, ulcers, bleeding as well as skin allergies.

- The uric acid reducing drug only works as long as you take it.
- Should you stop, your acid levels can rise again.
- This is why so many gout sufferers take this for the rest of their lives.

Why Gout Sufferers are Using Natural Means to Stop Gout Attacks

Because of the downsides with drugs given previously mentioned, more and more sufferers are turning to natural home-based treatments to be able to both eliminate the symptoms of a gout attack, and, reduce and maintain their uric acid at healthier levels to prevent recurring gout.

- And it really is very important to prevent frequent gout attacks as these can cause serious damage to your joints, even permanent damage.
- And they can also cause painful kidney stones and kidney damage in some cases.
